QUESTION: Why would a professed and staunch Libertarian such as Ron Paul officially run as a Republican Party candidate?

ANSWER 1 (planned obsolescence): Most libertarian voters are not registered Republicans, and therefore cannot vote for Ron Paul in any primary election or caucus, making Ron Paul’s campaign completely useless and obsolete due to lack of registered Libertarians as registered Republicans.

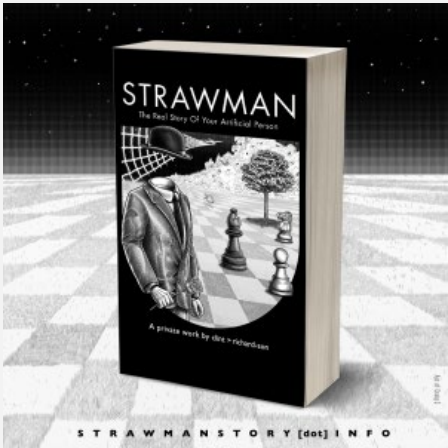

The series of presidential primary elections and caucuses held in each U.S. state and territory is part of the nominating process of United States presidential elections. This process was never included in the United States Constitution, and thus was created over time by the political parties. Some states only hold primary elections, some only hold caucuses, and others use a combination of both. These primaries and caucuses are staggered between January and June before the general election in November. The primary elections are run by state and local governments, while caucuses are private events that are directly run by the political parties themselves. A state’s primary election or caucus usually is an indirect election: instead of voters directly selecting a particular person running for President, it determines how many delegates each party’s national convention will receive from their respective state. These delegates then in turn select their party’s presidential nominee.

Each party (not the people) determines how many delegates are allocated to each state. Along with those delegates chosen during the primaries and caucuses, state delegations to both the Democratic and Republican conventions also include “unpledged” delegates, usually current and former elected officeholders and party leaders, who can vote for whomever they want.

Romney) is controlled and funneled out of the process before the primary even takes place, ensuring the bloodline candidate in both Democratic and Republican parties as the winning candidates, whom will progress to the General Election for president in November, where once again the “electoral college” of 538 people actually elect the president of the United States.

Note here that Mitt Romney and Barack Obama are indeed cousins of George Bush.

In 2004 George W. Bush ran as a “Republican” against “Democrat” John Forbes Kerry – his 16th cousin.

In 2008 Barack Obama ran against cousin John McCain.

Obama and McCain Are 22nd Cousins Descended From King Edward I of England!

McCain, it turns out, is a sixth cousin of First Lady Laura Bush.

Obama is eighth cousin, twice removed, of the 39th President, Jimmy Carter, through his seventh generation maternal grandfather, Moses Teague (1718-1799).

Obama is the tenth cousin of former presidents Gerald Ford (once removed), George H.W Bush (once removed) and George W. Bush (twice removed).

Romney is actually related to... Franklin D. Roosevelt is his eighth cousin, twice removed, and both Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover are his 10th cousins. Then there is his sixth cousin (four times removed) Franklin Pierce, and both 10th cousins Bush I and II. Three out of these six were even (gasp!) Democrats.

Note that Bush, Romney, and Obama are therefore cousins – the bloodline presidents, all presidents being cousins of George Washington and the Queen of England.

Rick Perry and Jon Huntsman are also cousins with Bush, Obama, and Romney.

Also note that George W. Bush is a 9th cousin once removed with Barbara Peirce, his mother because brothers Israel Reade and Ralph Reade married Mary Kendall and Mary Peirce, who were siblings of William Reade and Mabell Kendall in the min-1600's.

Through these same types of genealogically interbred relationships, George W. Bush is also twice a 10th cousin once removed and twice an 11th cousin once removed with his mother Barbara Peirce.

To be fair, Ron Paul is the one candidate (winning or losing) I cannot seem to find in this bloodline. I'm not done searching though...

More major research on this expanded genealogy coming very soon...

SOLUTION: There are two options...

1) Either all Libertarians must in the future register as Democrats or Republicans (a travesty and purposeful deceit of idealism and political subterfuge amounting to an unethical sabotage of another party) meaning that they will not be able to register as Libertarians for their own political party of Libertarian so as to participate in their own primary election process, or...

2) All libertarians must stay out of the Democratic and Republican private political parties and therefore never elect a Libertarian into one of these two "major" or mainstream political parties, which again completely controls (controlled opposition) and oppresses the possibility that a Libertarian will ever become president under the current domination of the two-party political system.

THE MYSTERY: Ron Paul is either completely aware of these facts, or completely ignorant.

THE ONLY CONCLUSION: In either situation (awareness or ignorance), and in consideration of these preceding facts, Ron Paul's 2012 campaign as a representative of the private association called the Republican Party was without question a controlled opposition – in the fact that in no way could he possibly win this primary election. At no time has Ron Paul been registered as a candidate for president in the general election with any other party affiliation, including Libertarian. Therefore, Ron Paul was never a true candidate for president of the United States.

In short, at no time during the entire 2012 election process (controlled by the private political party structure) was there any chance whatsoever for Ron Paul to actually become president of the United States.

It is this researchers opinion that Ron Paul is and was fully aware of these facts, considering his over 24 year congressional career and past attempts to run under the Libertarian party, and in considering his necessary knowledge of the facts presented here to run for president – including his attempts at gaining delegates in the Republican party as opposed to acquiring voters in the general elections.

It is also the opinion of this researcher that most Libertarians, as well as the vast majority of all registered (contracted) citizens eligible to vote in the United States are also completely unaware of the true political process in this country (corporation).

Oh, the joys and heartaches of logic and reason...

Clint,

I posted the comment ending with “truth will prevail” in the Todays Creatures from Jekyll Island post. I was wondering, given your extensive research on the CAFR, the United States as a corporation, and presidential election processes, if you are in favor of a stateless society.

I tend to agree with the likes of Larken Rose that government is a superstition stemming from giving up our autonomy to make a different set of rules for the bloodline rulers. I have seen very little in the way of what gave rise to the concept of stateism, however. Based on my preliminary research I believe it was the transition from hunter-gatherer into agriculture and the creation of surplus allowed this to happen.

So although I agree that a stateless society is the way to go, we must also examine the circumstances that allowed the state to arise in the first place and that in order for a stateless society to work, we must also change our economic system because the have and have-nots and the wealth gap will not make the “government disappears tomorrow” system work.

I believe that where Larkin Rose and others fall short in this, with all due respect (Larkin is one of my favorites!) is the burden of proof.

I say this because at no time in “history” has this society of statelessness been recorded, other than the tribal or native type peoples, and even they had a hierarchy of archetypal “leaders” and “elders”, which is for all intents and purposes a “government”.

And so the ultimate question becomes, who will protect the rights of individuals to be “stateless” without those people being part of a “state”, which is defined as a “body politic”?

I promote what I call organization without being organized. By this I mean that no one should join or contract with any group, but that does not preclude the ability to be an organized group of individuals with no binding “citizenship” to a body politic. Protection of others rights without the requirement to protect.

The question is... is the modern human too far gone to become individuals again? It is my belief that the answer is no, and therefore I do not have hope that this stateless individualism will happen, at least not in the way that is idealistically promoted by myself, Rose, and others. brainwashed, and chemically lobotomized people are perhaps not capable of changing, simply because the ability to change and to obtain spirituality and enlightenment has been “vaccinated” against, just as was predicted by Huxley in “Brave New World” and others.

In my eyes, we (the masses) are an experiment gone devilishly wrong, and sometimes I wonder at how it can be corrected. But then that makes me sound a bit like a eugenicist myself, and I do joke about that sometimes, as I’m sure others in the fight do. it’s not very funny though...

In the end, I only know that the people in power now that are acting as the stewards of this world and its people and creatures are mostly only interested in the next world (afterlife), and so they should not be the stewards of the people and Earth while in this life – they should not govern the living while worshipping death.

To this end, I believe we must act.

I agree and I think the first step is making people realize that the government has no special power over them. As humans we must have organization, but voluntarism as opposed to compulsory taxation and privatized education vs. government mandated schools are a good place to start. If we can simply remember to LEARN and THINK then bit by bit we can take back our autonomy and establish a more fair system in which the power gap is as minimalized as possible.

Two things I would love to work with you on since you seem to have a knack for finding primary documentation is what factors contributed/caused the rise of the state and when did currency first come into play. I believe these were the two main ingredients that led to debt banking and the corporation nation. Let’s work together towards revealing the truth and empowering the common man. Money and bloodlines should not run this world like they do. The truth shall set us free.

We can be of one accord, one voice, with echos of the greatness from our spirit, why does everybody want to come to USA? Those who have come will all vote now they are citizens, have we forgotten how to be citizens. The elite thinks so.

Good sir,

I've been a fan for a while. You are always spot on with your perspective and attentional to detail. You have laid out the legal straps of serfdom/bondage and I continue to applaud your hard work.

I take it (especially if your still near the salt lake area) you observe newly political fanatics that claim a virtue and understanding of liberty, people who tout RP as our savior. And yes, there are likely masses of RP supporters who still don't get "it," the basic mechanics of control through consent and unfortunate ignorance. But, the same path you traveled to accurately understand the Actual issues and forces oppressing the world, is a path that more people are just now traveling. Unfortunately, there are far too many people whoses souls are challenged.

Ron Paul's words and principled understanding of the relationship between us citizens and the intended authority of a federal government, has inspired and lead me to, with your help, discover the details and ideology behind solutions. I feel RP is stepping put on an edge a bit to even discuss the topics at hand. Nonetheless, he continues to open doors, through controlled media outlets, to people who will listen.

As you continue to stress, it's up to us, true patriots and americans under god, to unstrap the bonds of consent and ignorance, to stand up to the few who have tricked us for so long. I get your tensions with RP, but some credit is due.

I would enjoy a discussion on possible solutions or implementations of alternatives. As always, take care and I appreciate your work.

Thanks for the comment...

I've said it before and I 'll say it again: The legal definition (the only definition that matters) for the word "solution" is the fulfillment or voiding of a contract (Bouvier's, 1856)

Thus, with me, no discussion is necessary. End all contractual ties with the United States and other municipal governments, and you will be free.

The legal definition of "freedom" is to do whatever you wish without breaking the law. Therefore, "freedom" is a very bad word when legally applied to ourselves. Understand the difference between being free and having the privilege granted by the state of "freedom", and the solution is quite clear. Freedom comes only in contract, whereas being free is your natural state.

~ ~ ~I don't think you're a eugenicist (at least hope not; that's a bad crowd to hang with!!).

The human fighting spirit is still around, maybe sometimes it just needs an ignition, and a sense of purpose that doesn't include suicidal stupidity, like believing crooks are honest, and politicians are largely not crooks (see CAFR silence, etc.)

I'm recommending people read a book that seems to be on-line: "the rise and fall of diamonds" (1982, Edward Jay Epstein) which interviews many of the primary people. He's a good writer, and in this sample, and how Cecil Rhodes operated in the late 1800s to establish his monopoly diamonds — not just the mines, but also the supply chain — and eliminated the competition not to mention getting rid of the natives in the process (other than as would be useful laborers), while in the other side of the (collective) mouth talking about human rights — is real interesting.

If the Rhodes empire (Rhodesia finally got a namechange, and wants his bones sent back to England), and the scholarships (see Fullbright, Clinton mentoring, Harvard scholars, etc.) is understood properly, it also makes complete sense with why US government has been privatized (see Walter Burien) AND massive public education dumbed down to just enough to train a middle class (see "brainwashed") to manage the lower class to the ruling class can do all the banking, finance, etc. . . . It just makes sense to me.

Where brainwashing doesn't work, there's force to back it up. The intent to dominate and strip the assets of USA economically is no different than was done in Africa.

They are resisting (striking, etc.) also — and getting shot in the process at times. The DeBeers/Anglo American/Rhodes (first)/Oppenheimer (3rd generation Oppenheimer is now I believe the richest man in South Africa ("Nicky")), while his grandpa "Sir Ernest" formed Anglo American with JPMorgan in 1917, after which they got control of the Diamond industry (De Beers).

If you like a can't-put-down story with major players that is relevant today, this one is a good one to look at.

What I don't get is why we keep voluntarily giving our own masters/rulers for the benefit of the doubt when it hasn't been earned.

While I hear the anti-Zionist stuff, I still made a note that it was in part the Inquisition and medieval guilds that had driven jews who wanted to have any profession, into things like diamond-polishing or money-lending. When African discoveries were going to flood the market, they watched out for their own interests (and more than).

<http://edwardjayepstein.com/diamond/chap8.htm>

Not that the whole crew aren't maniacal narcissists, and sometimes genocidal. They AND their offspring and associates: start wars, break strikes, set up monopolies, then talk about peace, love and human rights, setting up philanthropies, etc. The whole diamond trade (not that old, really) is convincing the world that something has real value, knowing it doesn't, which to me seems symbolic. It was based on, actually, convincing Americans (now, other countries) that Diamonds are Forever (buy, and don't resell, it's called "overhang," how many diamonds the public actually holds; it would flood the market and eliminate their market, probably) and necessary for a symbol of engagement. (I pawned my ring a while back for a fraction of the original cost, which is all they are really worth).
